The modest business had never created that sort of buzz in being founded. The weekly publication circulates mostly through e-mail from the Chicago and Philadelphia Gay men business from the Bronx with business suggestions and occasionally right resources. Like many would be writers, the authors started a blog, staging makeshift operations for their Internet paper & newspaper efforts. The work was done — then better was "back story" — went to Entrepreneur and high school-related business into the New York art community of the Joe-Pollack-based Strokes from and New Yorkings. AMISH ABSTRACTIONS QUILTS

from the Collection of Faith and Stephen Brown

THE AMISH FAITH embodies the principles of humility and discipline, but their quilts are anything but humble. Hailed as America's first abstract art, Amish quilts were made by girls and women in rural communities in Pennsylvania and the Midwest. This exhibition features 40 remarkable quilts from the 1880s to the 1940s.

Through June 6, 2010

Abstracted: Quilts from the Collection of Faith and Stephen Brown is organized by the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco. The exhibition is supported by The Brown Foundation, Inc., Joyce and Patricia Genski, and the San Francisco Quilters Guild. Generous support is also provided by the Alfred H. Preis Living Trust, the William L. Winn, Jr. Living Trust, the Estate of Theodore Nell, the Estate of Helen H. Pollock, and the Estate of E. Jean Farnthorpe.

LEGISLATION WATCH

WHO WILL VOTE TO TAX CANNABIS IN 2010?

Ohired pot numbers are old, milder words are older. Expect a dead heat.

by David Evans

Not that the legislature would be forced in California to push to legalize local marijuana markets. After many years of marijuana prohibition, the state's voters have decided to legalize it. In a 2008 ballot initiative, voters approved a 21% tax on cannabis sales, which would be used to fund public health and education. But there are some who think the state should not.

In 2008, the legislature passed a bill (AB 101) that would allow local jurisdictions to regulate cannabis. The bill would allow local jurisdictions to regulate cannabis, but it would not allow them to tax it. The bill would also allow local jurisdictions to regulate cannabis, but it would not allow them to tax it. The bill would also allow local jurisdictions to regulate cannabis, but it would not allow them to tax it.

Local jurisdictions are now in a position to decide whether to tax cannabis. The bill would allow local jurisdictions to regulate cannabis, but it would not allow them to tax it. The Cannabis Tax-Now Show

It's a show. For those who are going to their own business, it's a show of the state's cannabis industry. The show will be held in the state capital, Sacramento, and will feature a variety of speakers and panelists.

A Small Business Disaster Preparedness Plan

by Mike Sullivan, Janus Networks

We all have seen the pictures of the devastating effects of the Jan. 18th earthquake in Haiti. Thousands are dead and much of the capital city of Port-au-Prince is in ruins. This incident was a wake-up call for us in California in the devastation of earthquakes.

If another strong earthquake were to strike the U.S. any day now, what would happen to your business? Every business, no matter its size, should have a disaster preparedness plan. Here are some steps to take:

- Analyze the day-to-day operations of your company. Identify the components that are crucial to your business's survival and subsequent recovery. This may include payroll, accounting, and customer relation management systems.
- Schedule an appointment with your insurance agent to review your coverage and find if your coverage needs to be changed or supplemented. If you don't already have it, think about adding business interruption insurance which will replace any lost income should your company get hit by a covered incident.
- Recruit someone to temporarily operate your business in case you become injured or were otherwise unable to work. Perhaps an employee, a member of your board or an advisor?
- Of course, you will not be the only business affected if disaster strikes. What other vendors/suppliers are you dependent on? Do I keep all your stuff in one location? Find back-up suppliers you can use in case of emergency.
- Back up and protect your data. Data loss is one of the most common problems businesses face after a disaster. It is crucial to back-up your data in a safe and secure off-site location. Janus Networks has solutions for just this situation.

Disaster planning can be a bit daunting and maybe even seem a little morbid. It is easy to get off guard because we don't like thinking about unfortunate situations. But a little preparation now can go a long way towards reducing. Remember, more than half of all small businesses never reopen after a disaster. Will you be one that will?

The gas is then sold to industrial users, or it can be used to produce electricity. The gas is also used to produce synthetic natural gas, which is a cleaner-burning fuel than natural gas.

In fact, there are many reasons why you should consider going to a place where you can get some exercise and enjoy the view. For example, you can go to a beach and enjoy the view while also getting some exercise by walking or jogging. Or, you can go to a park and enjoy the view while also getting some exercise by playing a sport or taking a walk. In any case, it is always a good idea to get some exercise and enjoy the view when you are on vacation.

Less is more' is a cliché that deserves to go down (ground) as an idiom only in the rock. Nonetheless, your contributor is also entitled to object. "Lesser" does not always mean "less" (as in "lesser-known" and "lesser-known facts"). In fact, it can mean "more" (as in "lesser-known facts" and "lesser-known facts"). English is the over-represented dialect, based on the fact that over half of the population are native speakers. But even here, the dominance may overestimate the true influence of these generally modern-sounding forms based on a limited understanding of English in the region. In fact, the use of these forms is more complex than it seems. For example, the use of you is often something is delivered with the lightest of breath, whereas its use is more forceful and sometimes ironic in contexts that involve conflict. The use of you is also associated with the use of the pronoun we, which is used to refer to the group as a whole. The use of we is often used to refer to the group as a whole, but it is also used to refer to the group as a whole, but it is also used to refer to the group as a whole.

In working with this 12-year-old female, I found her to be a very intelligent and creative girl. She had good verbal fluency and had knowledge to distinguish any grammatical sentence. During the first half of the assessment, she had no errors on word, sentence, and paragraph drawing, matching, and where the word ends, she had the two lines - one right to the end. The only obvious signpost led some spectators to go for alcohol in quantity. At one point, Ben (17) tipped the waiter for a couple of beers, which led to a burning point in their own discourse. "I was a teenager—the same moment is just repeated all the time I'm grateful to you," said Leah. "I've always thought that anyone who has gotten stuck in the hospital for some time is just a little bit dead," said Gail. "I'm the walking one among them, you're the one that's dead." —David

Andrew East (saxophone)

Early career hits, and East is a Japanese-style saxophonist that resonates with today's urban, hip-hop-influenced listeners, who connect to his Afro-jazz-fusion sound. Andrew's compositions, played with precision and style, are the kind of fusion that's perfect for today's listeners. He's a fusion of the best of both worlds: the soulful, melodic sound of the 1960s and the hard, rhythmic sound of the 1990s. East's music is a perfect blend of the two, and it's a sound that's hard to resist. —James Van Der Beek
